City parks will host and benefit by Brandywine Festival of the Arts

The Brandywine Festival of the Arts will return to the banks of the Brandywine River on Saturday and Sunday, Sept. 11 and 12 just a few blocks from downtown Wilmington.

“Opportunities for volunteers are just about unlimited,” says Ed Weirauch, President of Friends of Wilmington Parks, which is coordinating volunteers. If you are interested in volunteering, please call 302-656-3665.

Approximately 225 artists and craftspeople will display in Brandywine Park between the Van Buren Street Bridge and the Brandywine Zoo. Music and refreshments will also be featured.

“We are thrilled to have this event return to Brandywine Park,” says Ed Weirauch, President of Friends of Wilmington Parks. Over 100 years ago, these parks were designed as a meeting place for the people of Wilmington to enjoy the river and this beautiful atmosphere and this Festival is a great opportunity to do just that.”

Admission to the event is $5 and for every attendee, Friends of Wilmington Parks will receive $1. Admission is free for children 10 and younger.

Friends of Wilmington Parks works to maintain and restore Alapocas Run, Brandywine, Rockford and H. Fletcher Brown Parks.
